

Mr. Trump.

International Public Notice

January 31, 2026

The United States of America —
Federation of States

Notice to Principals is Notice to Agents; Notice to Agents is Notice to Principals:

There is the actual world of physical assets, for example, gold and silver coinage in the monetary system, and there is the airy-fairy legal fiction financial world that functions on “commercial paper” — debits and credits and ledger “money of account” and stocks and bonds and delivery contracts, and so on.

Traditionally, the world of actual money and actual assets is defined as “international trade” and the world of fiat currencies and notes and bonds, etc., is defined as “commerce”. Only incorporated entities participate in commerce, so your gift of a franchise named after any American needs to be re-examined.

Americans, generally speaking, didn’t choose to be franchises or shareholders or wish to operate in commerce, and they still don’t. Any citizenship obligation attached to the “gift” of commercial franchises named after us cannot be enforced. Mr. Rubio needs to be providing remedy for this circumstance and the attendant legal presumptions need to be removed, permanently.

Any other response is obstruction of trade and any continued legal presumption of citizenship obligations against individual Americans who have recorded their status as non-citizen state nationals is aggravated identity theft.

All Americans who have declared their State nationality and who have published and recorded their natural political status, cannot be treated as British Subjects, nor secondarily, as Papist Municipal citizens of the United States.

We are non-commercial by nature and are naturally exempt from corporate taxes and levies and you all have cause to know that.

Naming foreign corporation franchises after us in no way changes these facts.

Whereupon we demand due remedy and consideration, restitution and recompense, for all that has been stolen from us under conditions of fraud and under color of law.

Many silver commodity buyers found out last week that a delivery contract for silver is not the same as silver in hand. One is a promise to deliver silver upon whatever conditions need to be met (commerce based on a delivery contract purchased in good faith), and the other is actual metal (trade in physical goods).

What happens when there is no silver to deliver?

The people are owed their money back, but it's the same paper money they started with, only now that much more depreciated by inflation. The company that took their paper money months or years ago declares "force majeure" — basically, saying it's not our fault, there's no silver for us to buy, so we can't deliver it to you.

The whole exercise of buying silver as a hedge against inflation of the currency is rendered moot.

They took people's funds and gave them a promise to deliver silver, but the rats never actually bought any silver. They waited for people to demand delivery in physical silver, and used their credit in the interim — maybe to buy someone else's silver, maybe to invest in something else — and figured they, the Vermin, could always buy silver on the open market to fill the "open orders" later on, if and when anyone demanded actual silver.

The whole paper commodities market is a Ponzi Scheme, duded up in fancy legal terms, "allocated" and "unallocated" and so on, but a Ponzi Scheme excused by unexplained technical terms is still a Ponzi Scheme.

Millions of rooked investors are staring at this situation and feeling defrauded, as they should. The companies responsible shrug. It's not their fault that people bought "unallocated" silver — that is, silver that wasn't actually bought and inventoried and set aside for them in a vault. It was theoretical silver. Paper silver.

Nobody bothered to explain that to the investors.

The ComEx acted under the same presumption as the banks, that only 10% of the people would ask for their money back on any given day, so all they were responsible for was keeping 10% of the actual commodity on hand: in other words, fractional reserve banking applied to commodities.

That's why ComEx only had 11% of the outstanding silver delivery orders on hand as actual silver.

No doubt there are imaginary beef cows and sow bellies and corn crops roaming around the ethersphere, too.

Here the investors are frustrated and fuming, but even if they were wary enough to buy actual silver that they can see and feel and touch and stick under their mattress, the story is potentially worse.

Back during the 1930's FDR was granted extraordinary executive powers by the then-Congress, which was really just a corporate board of directors in charge of the United States, Inc. He basically gave himself the power to seize anything he wanted to seize in the name of "national emergency".

That wasn't lawful, legal, or justified then or now.

FDR, who we call the "King Rat", seized metric tons of gold from private investors and paid them $20 per ounce, then reset the price to $35 per ounce, and not only kept the gold, but kept the collateral profit, too.

Nice. Pay with paper, get an actual commodity, increase the price of that commodity, reap the difference, and still be out nothing but the printing cost.

Mr. Trump, it appears from your recent actions that your Administration is setting up to do the same thing, only this time the stakes are much higher.

It's your corporation's fault if they don't have any strategic silver reserves — they have certainly had gobs and gobs of our purloined credit at their disposal to buy silver; Con-gress spent it on worthless and harmful things instead.

Everyone is watching the schtick this time.

Mr. Trump, you are advertising that your Administration is giving away $3.5 Trillion in gold recaptured from undesignated "elites" and "cabal" institutions. and stipulating that only British Subjects, only those insiders who hold "Trump Tokens" will get a share of the returned assets.

On what possible scale of insanity and payola is this being proposed? Whatever is recouped of American assets, belongs to those who stand up as Americans. Not those who are paid off to act as British Subjects. We are not interested now or ever in being British Subjects of any kind, anywhere, ever, at all.

Our Forefathers fought for eight long years to make that perfectly clear and cognizant for everyone, forever and ever, Amen. We claim the benefit of every peace treaty and guarantee we are owed.

Anyone who isn't proven to be a Brit by their own free and knowing and fully disclosed decision as an adult, is not a Brit. You can't make contracts with babies. You can't foist off obligations that are the result of unconscionable contracts made by Third Parties.

You can't create British Subjects out of paper any more than you can create silver out of paper. You can't create Papist Municipal citizens of the United States out of paper any more than you can create silver out of paper.

This Gross Breach of Trust, Violation of Service Contract, and Sin against Mankind must come to an end.

The paper silver delivery contracts were proven to be worthless, so, of course, the "value" of paper silver is dropping like a rock. If you are holding silver delivery contracts and there's no silver, guess what?

So the market screams, "Silver crashed! 37% loss!" — on paper silver, not the actual thing. Nobody says that, but we know that.

All the major national mints are shut down. All the precious metals dealers are shut down. Nobody has any silver. And if they do have any, they don't know the price of it because trading has been shut down in obstruction of trade, using Emergency Powers that were never granted and which don't exist contractually.

Show us, please, where The Constitution of the United States of America, says one word about "Emergency" Executive Powers?

The Vermin responsible for this situation want people to panic sell into the market so that they, the Vermin, can buy silver at a vastly reduced price and re-leverage their collateral holdings, which are also purloined.

Say the price for actual silver is $150 an ounce in Shanghai, and the Vermin fool people into selling for $90 an ounce — the paper silver price — bingo! $60 per ounce profit. Arbitrage it to Shanghai and skip on home all the way to Brisbane.

The corporate Vermin are leaving the living people to play the chump again, because "average investors" are confused, because they think that paper silver losses were actual silver losses.

The same trick plays another way.

Say the paper silver price drops to $60 per ounce, because nobody trusts the Vermin to deliver and the seller is holding its own remaining delivery contracts as the basis for the price.

Come on, Jethro, naught into naught is naught. Naught plus naught is naught. Naught minus naught is naught....

But you, Mr. Donald J. Trump, refer to the paper price index –and so, when goons come to our homes and farms and steal the 200 ounces of silver Grandma had set aside for a rainy day, they will give her $60 an ounce to make it tidy and they will pay in paper I.O.U.s — then either sock the real silver away for actual strategic defense use, or, sell it at actual market prices and take the profit that should have been Grandma's.

She gets to pay the opportunity and storage costs for you and your band of Merry Robbers, as you all propose to reap the benefit of her investment.

Mr. Trump, the actual owner, is by definition, the living owner of actual silver, and anyone who says otherwise is nothing but an armed robber in a suit.

Once again, they are planning to steal the silver in Grandma's Cookie Jar, reap the profit off her investment, and give her their paper I.O.U.s in inequitable "consideration" in return.

Why not call it for what it is? Armed robbery. Inland piracy. Gross breach of trust and service contract.... aggravated identity theft...

Mr. Trump — there's a difference between paper silver and actual silver, just as there is a difference between actual money and fiat. Paper silver belongs in the airy-fairy world of commerce. Actual silver belongs to the world of men.

As long as you and your personnel refuse to come home to the land and soil jurisdiction of this actual country, you have no lawful jurisdiction related to us, our land, our silver, or anything else of physical substance.

Your District Courts and DISTRICT COURTS all need to be removed now to the District of Columbia, where they arguably belong, and your personnel need to makeshift. A new understanding is in order.

All you've got is a service contract in international jurisdiction to defend this country. Defending it does not include defrauding its people or attacking Iran. It does not allow you or anyone else to presume anything against Americans or American assets based on undisclosed registration of babies as British Subjects, or later registrations of those British Subjects as Papist Municipal citizens of the United States.

Defending this country means defending our persons as firmly stated by Article IV of The Constitution of the United States of America. Protect our persons, not misrepresent them, not misidentify them.

Give Mr. Rubio a kick in the rump for us. It's his job and responsibility to provide remedy for this circumstance and it has been the job of the United States Secretary of State to provide our exemption from foreign taxes and levies since 1864. Not that any of them did their jobs. Not that any of them provided access to remedy. Not that any of this has ever been "legalized" without remedy.
