The United States of America —
Federation of States

The Great Royal Schism began in earnest in 478 A.D.

It was an argument between those who believe that mankind can be taught to govern itself and those who believe that mankind is too weak and stupid to chart its own course.

On a more intimate level, it was a fight between those who recognized Nature's God, the Creator, as the only King, and those who wanted to maintain the Canaanite practice of human rulership.

For generations, we have kept our faith in mankind's ability, if educated properly, to rule itself and self-govern successfully — a premise that has never been allowed a fair test.

When the Americans came too close to success, less than two generations into the American Experiment, they were undermined by deceit and short lifespans. Their servants became their masters and they were forced back into the old patterns of superstition and ignorance, ego and greed.

In our view and experience, mortal man was never meant to bear the weight of rulership, not meant to function as a replacement for Nature's God.

Instead, we are meant to be caretakers and the only rule we are meant to embrace is the rule of love.

Our family ruled for long generations, and we saw our lives governed while we governed others.

Our true loves were bypassed, our personal truth was forced into shadow, while unseen unelected parties used us as their means to project power; our very lives were reduced to the endless duty we were "born" to bear — like race horses or dogs bred for a purpose.

Here, in modern terms, is the same story, the same experience, echoed by King Charles III:

For over 1500 years, our family has recognized monarchy as "a cruelty to man and an affront to God."

King Charles III has finally admitted the cruelty of the Crown.

In the days to come, this ancient disagreement will come into focus again, and the judgment of those who have benefited from crippling mankind and from disrespecting natural limits and roles, will be shown up for what it is: self-serving disregard for eternal truth.

The cruelty of the Crown has always been apparent if anyone bothered to look.

This year, millions of people will see how both Prince Charles and Princess Diana were made into living sacrifices, right in front of our eyes.

Let those who have ears, listen. Let those who have eyes, see.

Let those who have hearts recognize what was done to these royal children — and realize why the British Monarchy must be redefined.

So said, so signed, so sealed:
